THE FABIAN SOCIETY.
A COURSE OF LECTURES
ON
The History and Implications of Equality
BY ROBERT DUDLEY HOWLAND
THE MEMORIAL HALL LIBRARY,
FARRINGTON STREET, E.C.
On FRIDAYS (with one exception) at 8 p.m.
These lectures are open to the public.

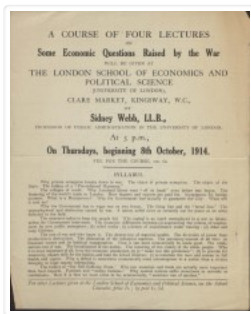

Successive aims at social and economic equality; but the aims and means of such equality is still indeterminate. When Socialists discuss the question, diversity of opinion is very common; and it is exactly the sort of equality to be desired. As we already possess a more advanced state of society, and take practical steps to bring it about, the need to study our status in the light of equality grows. The lecture we present the greater is the danger of making false steps, when we are not of our direction.

The object of this course of lectures is to set our minds to work on broad lines upon the question of social and economic equality. How far, we want to be reminded of what human experience has to tell. In the various phases of social life which our time has traversed or is traversing, what tendencies toward economic equality can we trace? What do they mean to us? What do they mean to the world? Where do they lead? How far are they a mere counterpoise to some sort of permanent equilibrium, and how far are they the sign of a new era? In the light of a new society, what progress? Evidently, no society could exist were we looking toward a peaceful cooperation based on it. How far has this co-operation pre-arranged or unarranged, or made, support, been of equality as to basis or to substance? We need to know more of the history of the past, especially the history of the present, to see the role played by the idea of equality in their evolution. We can learn much from the experience and the opinions of the founders of modern Socialism upon this subject. Certainly Socialism being in its inception a new, and its origin being closely related to the state of modern society, it has been considered how to treat this subject also somewhat broadly. This is attempted in the four and five of our course.
