WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1925

THE PEOPLE

The people is a head of muddy things,
That knows not its own strength and therefore stands
Cautious with mud and water - the universal hands
Of a mere child guide is with his and runs.
One kick would be enough to break the chain;
But the head down, and what the child demands
It does, and his own terror multiplies,
Confused and staggered by his own 'twain.

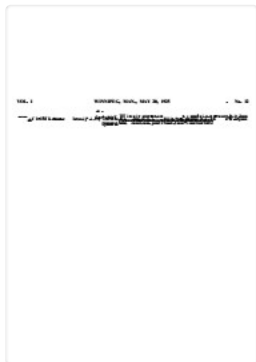

More wonderful: With his own hands it has
And grasps itself 'gainst death and war,
For good itself can be kept from its own door
By evil and all things between earth and heaven;
But this it knows not, and if not wiser
To tell this truth, it kills him miserably.
